Where is the idea of American liberty in such action as this?

The number of workingmen who do not belong to labor organizations in this country is greatly in advance of the number who do. By what authority, then, does this arrogant minority designate the large majority as "rate" and "scabs," and such like offensive epithets? They cry out against tyranny, but they, themselves, are the worst of tyrants. Where labor organizations do this, they subvert the object for which they were organized.

The riparian case of Lur v. Goodrich had been using water from the stream, and the lower proprietor. Goodrich had been using water from the stream, for irrigation, under an agreement with Swift, which they had reduced to writing. "The ordicians and explanations which have recently appeared in the papers concerning the 'Chapman oranges' and the card published by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy ratiroad, I explain as follows: The California managers requested a car of choice fruit of the Orange Growers' Association, to be paid for by the Clitres Pair managers. Mr. Chapman was induced to furnish and ship the same, and I received the bill of lading. But while the car was in traneit, Mr. Chapman changed the consignment to Mears. Porter Brothers. This he had a perfect right to do, but I do not believe be would have done so had the California managers astisfied him that he would have been paid for the fruit. We could not afford to pay the $260 freight, therefore declined to buy it. There is no evidence that either had been been been duringly in the matter.

When the Othicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad card appeared, I showing it to Mears. Clarks and Holt, asked by whose direction that was done; both promptly realised that they 'heven nothing about it." I replied: "I am very glad to know that our management has nothing to do with it. "I immediately called upon Mr. Wallane, the Othicago, Burlington and Quincy agent, who ordered it printed. He told me he seen his man to make the how such a card should be arranged. The man did not find to know that our management has nothing to do with it. "I immediately called upon Mr. Wallane the Mr. Holt should him that it was "all right;" and it was printed, as it was "all right;" and it was printed, as my was "all right; and it was printed, as the way and immediately printed another, substituting Southern Californis for Riverside. I have full confidence in Mr. Wallace's integrity."

TAYLOR'S TOUT.

TAYLOR'S TOOT.

mother Account of the Barate John Taylor, an account of whose trouble at Barstow was published June 3 writes his version of the affair as follows:

writes his version of the affair as follows:

"Three months ago I was employed by the California Sonthern, and, at their request, sworn in as a deputy sheriff in San Bernardino and San Diego counties.
I was introduced to almost every one of the company's employes as a special officer of the company, and wore a largesized deputy's star. I received a written order from the superintendent to go to Baratow in search of a missing freightcar. After a thorough search, I was unable to find the car; but I did find a car used for a living house by Howard, the C.
S. B. B. agent. The old number was painted over, and another one painted on top of it. I asked the agent if be could tell me the original number of the car.
He said: 'Neither you nor any other spotter can take that car; it was sent to me—it don't belong to the C. S.' I left the office without saying a word.
In less than five minutes I was surrounded by a drunken mob. It was Sunday. I entered a car of the Los Angeles train, when the mob, led by the agent's pet, the night watohman, tried to take the car by storm. Just as the leader take the car by storm. Just as the leader entered I arrested him, and at the sight of my pistol and handcuffs the so-called entered I arrested him, and at the sight of my pistol and handcuffs the so-called citizens of Barstow trotted off like a band of frightened sheep. They soon returned with more men and whisky, came in through both doors and soon filled the car. I was robbed of a few dollars, and my pistol and handcuffs were taken from me. I had but one pistol. Tuttle, who, it is said, saved my life, was in Los Angeles four hours before I left the enemy's camp. Who took care of me all that time? I have been in Barstow six times since that, and I will be there again soon.

I have been on the turf too long to be afraid of anything except an article such as was published in your paper. So far as the citizens of Barstow go, I care no more for their talk and threats than I do for the bark of the smallest dog that runs the streets of this city. I can swear, and prove it, that I have never caused the discharge of one man while I have been in the employ of the C. S. R. R. I am not charged with an attempt to murder, nor any other offense." A Biterfut Couple Mystifying P mona and Vicinity. Pomous Progress.

For two or three days last week a very nicely-dressed gentleman, accompanied by a very prepossessing-looking lady—the former about twenty-eight or thirty, and the latter about twenty-four or twenty-five years of age—were guerts a the Jentral Hotel, and frequenty prome enaded our streets and snaded, flower bordered walks, apparently in the very midst of that, to some, delightful period, called, for what reason we know not, by that most expressive epithet, the honeymoon. They seemed to have just entered upon that happy and blissful state, whose ending is often less romantic by far than the Deginning. They were, to all appearances, ginning. They were, to all appearances, devotedly attached to each other. Real estate men kept a business eye out, estate men kept a business eye out, thinking after a few more days of bliss ful rest in our delightful semi-tropic land, the strangers would put on their business clothes, buy a handsome and expensive home and settle down to raising fruit, berries, and possibly potatoes and chickens. Our rurniture man, grocery men and hardware dealers, were likewise oncourto believe that their patrone were alout to be augmented, to the extent of two, at least; Loucks even hoped that he would find a customer for some of those handsome art p.ct ures. On Thursday the lady and gen-tleman in question went to the First National Bank of Pomona, to supp y ens ives with the collateral neces $473 to make whatever purchases or to the chase whatever purchases or to the chase whatever comfort they might find necessary. The bank had an order of telegraph to pay $75 to one Rev. E. Byron, the name the applicant for coin gave to the bank officials. Before the gave to the Dank omeials. The aforesaid young couple, having hept a close look out from the bank, observed the elderly folks on the opposite sidewalk, and at once beat a retreat into the bank's business office in the rear, and thence from a side door to the street. They did not wait to receive the money, but went up street at a very rapid gait, evidently intent on escaping the judgment to come. They went out east of town, tried to secure a team at several places, but failing. team at several places, but failing. S nirrel & Gopher Exterminator rashed on down the San Antonio wash for a distance, then across the Chino ranch. The old gentleman and lady, who proved to be Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson, of loss Angeles, the father and mother of the you g lady, secured the services of J. W. Wright and started in pursuit. He failed to overtake them and returned. bubsequently he followed them to San Barnardino, where they had secreted themselves, and could not be found. It was learned that they had gone to Ontario the same evening
